The Pastor Speaks

DRAWING NEAR TO GOD
James 4:8-12

In James 4:8 there is a precept, something we are to do, "Draw nigh (or near) to God." There is also a promise, something God will do when we, "Draw near". "He will draw nigh (or near) to you". In one sense we are always near to God. We learn from Psal. 139:7-10 and Acts 17:27 & 28. In another sense, because He is Holy and we are by nature, sinful we are estranged from Him, Eph. 4:18. The wonderful thing is that God invites, urges, and pleads with men to come to Him. This is reiterated throughout the Bible, this is what James is saying, "Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you". But how can sinful men and women draw near to a Holy God? There are three requirements. First we must come in faith, Heb. 11:6, next we must come through Jesus Christ, John 14:6, and next we must come in sincerity, Heb. 10:22.

The important thing is that we do come, that we actually draw near, for when we do this God guarantees us that He will meet with us and bless us. Men draw near to God by confessing their sins, I John 1:9. An example of this is found in Psalms 50:15. David confessed before god that he was sinful. Just as I am without one plea, But that Thy blood was shed for me:
And that bid'st me come to thee
Oh lamb of God I come.
Just as I am Thou wilt receive,
Wilt welcome, pardon, cleanse, relieve
Because Thy promise I believe
Oh lamb of God I come.

The Sunday School Lesson

HERBERT C. BRADSHAW
P. O. Box 1833
Durham, N. C. 27702
Comments on the International Sunday School lesson for November 12, 1972 Nationalism and Internationalism Background Scripture: Isaiah 45:1-6; Amos 9:7-8; Jonah; 1 Timothy 2:1-5

"...He made from one every nation of men to live on all the face of the earth . . ." Acts 17:26

Although the book of Genesis portrays the human race as descended from a common ancestral couple — "the man called his wife's name Eve because she was the mother of all living" — and although this concept was reiterated by the apostle Paul in his sermon at Athens — "he made from one every nation of men to live on all the face of the earth" — the Scriptural concept of the unity of humanity has not always been accepted.

In the 18th century, the prevalent view among scientists was that the human race had diverse origins, each of the various races of men having had a different beginning. For the world of science, Samuel Stanhope Smith, the founder of Hampden-Sydney College, presented a novel view in a paper, "On the Causes of the Variety of Complexion and Figure in the Human Species," which he read at the 1787 meeting of the American Philosophical Society. In brief, Smith propounded the Biblical view that the entire human race has a common origin; that climate, the state of society, and the manner of living explain the differences by which people have come to be classified into separate races; and that in barbarous and savage cultures man degenerated from the level on which God had created him.

Regardless of whether people believe in a common origin or different origins for humanity, in practice the people of the world are well divided. The most pronounced division of humanity is into nations. That groups of people should assemble them into nations is, paradoxical as it may seem, an extension of the self-centeredness which has been a dominant characteristic of man since through his disobedience he alienated himself from God.

One would suppose that self-centeredness would dispose man to independence, and in some respects it does. It also looks toward self-preservation, and man, primarily concerned with the self though he may be, realizes that he alone cannot provide all the protection he needs. Within the group, or the nation, he may exhibit his self-centeredness in exploitation of his fellows, but he is also willing to cooperate with them in setting up a government to protect both his person and his property. When the nation sees the possibility of enriching both itself and the individuals who may it up, it has not hesitated to wage war on another nation to seize what it may have.

With the development of the nation, men have cultivated and encouraged the spirit of nationalism as a means of giving strength to the state that it may better serve the interests of its members. Nationalism in itself is not wrong, but it can be and sometimes is wrongly used. .

Men have learned to live together reasonably well in nations, but they have not learned to live as people of one world. The closeness which modern transportation and communication give to all parts of the world makes it necessary, from a practical standpoint, for men every where to live together as on people. From the spiritual point of view, it is important for people to live together as one people because God loves everyone and seeks the redemption of each one and Jesus commanded His disciples to preach His gospel to all nations.

Two In County Complete Defensive Driving Course

Lt. J. L. Hedrick, Virginia State Police retired, of Appomattox and Mrs. W. W. Wallace of Pamplin have completed the Defensive Driving Course sponsored by the Virginia Highway Safety Council and are qualified to instruct classes in defensive driving.

The Defensive Driving Course is a major element of the National Safety Council's Driver Improvement Program. The professional caliber of the course as an adult driver education program is attested by the fact that it has been adopted by the U. S. Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, NRTA-AARP, state government units, police departments, and over 153 community service organizations. Community service organizations have been responsible for training 46 per cent of the total graduates to date.

The course is usually taught in four two-hour sessions, two sessions per week for two consecutive weeks. Ninety-eight per cent of the graduates claim they are better drivers as a result of this course, that they found it an enjoyable and memorable learning experience, and that they would recommend the course to other drivers.

The Defensive Driving Course has demonstrated professional caliber and audience appeal. The course is outlined as follows: Session I - "Preventable or Not?"; Session II - "How to Avoid a Collision with the Vehicle Ahead"; Session III - "How to Avoid a Collision with the Vehicle Behind"; Session IV - "How to Avoid a Collision with an Oncoming Vehicle"; Session V "How to Avoid an Intersection Collision"; Session VI "The Art of Passing and Being Passed"; Session VII "The Mystery Crash"; and Session VIII "How to Avoid Other Common Types of Collisions".

Plans are to set up a schedule for classes in the Defensive Driving Course to be taught by Lt. Hedrick and Mrs. Wallace, additional information will be forthcoming. It would be good to set up classes to meet the needs of the community. Clubs and civic organizations are being contacted to see if they would be interested in sponsoring the course. This would certainly be a good training course for the high school students and young drivers as well as for adult drivers.
